Camille Dixon Bio

As host of numerous PBS specials, Camille Dixon has built a career on sharing knowledge and understanding of our world. Beginning as a college student radio broadcaster at tiny Ricks College in Idaho, she became the classical music morning host at Provo, Utah’s KBYU-FM. She made the transition into public television joining KOCE-TV in Orange County in 1997. Camille now travels the world for PBS. She has just returned from Amsterdam, Netherlands, where she introduced a new musical group to America. Camille still retains her radio roots as executive producer of the public radio series “How We Saw It”. Mother of two college students and a newly licensed driver, she divides her time between Utah and Southern California.
